7 NFT Types You Need to Know
1/1 Artwork

In contrast to multi-edition drops, 1/1 artworks are individual pieces released sporadically (think XCOPY, Beeple), or small-batch collections in which each NFT is individually created by a crypto artist. Think Arcus, Bois, etc.

PFPs / Avatars

Profile-picture projects (PFPs) started with Larva Labs' CryptoPunks and were then popularized by Bored Ape Yacht Club. There are countless projects in this category including Cool Cats, Doodles, Sup Ducks, Deadfellaz, etc.

Generative Art

Generative art is exactly what it sounds like - art that has been generated by a computer in some way. While often created by a generative algorithm or artificial intelligence (AI), some works created by physical robots fall under this definition as well. Generative art has experienced a renaissance and market boom due to NFTs, with projects like Art Blocks, Autoglyphs and Braindrops pushing the envelope for the art form.

Collectibles

As the digital equivalent of trading cards and memorabilia, these NFTs boast differing levels of rarity and are coveted by enthusiasts within various fields. Think NBA Top Shot, Hot Wheels, and Rob Gronkowski NFTs.

Photography NFTs

Photography NFTs are growing in popularity and are poised to see continued growth in 2022. Photographers like Justin Aversano, JN Silva, Isaac "Drift" Wright, Julie Pacino and more have found a foothold and built a strong collector base.

Music NFTs

Music NFTs often pair music with a visual accompaniment or allow the audio to exist as an NFT itself (think Catalog, Sound.xyz, Songcamp). Some music NFTs also allow owners to share in the value of the release. 3LAU's Royal startup allows fans to invest in an artist's work and receive royalties in return, while Moda DAO aims to bridge the gap between the contemporary record industry and web3 technology.

Gamified NFTs

Gamified projects utilize their NFTs in a game which can often be played to earn digital assets. Some projects mint and release NFTs as part of the in-game experience (ex. Axie Infinity), while others build a game centered around an existing collection (ex. Bored Ape Yacht Club). Other examples include Zed Run, Neon District and Parallel.
